EUROPEAN COMMISSION FOR DEMOCRACY THROUGH LAW
(VENICE COMMISSION)

Guidelines
for the presentation of contributions to the Bulletin on Constitutional Case-Law
and CODICES

The aim of the *Guidelines for the presentation of contributions to the Bulletin on Constitutional Case-law and CODICES*¹ is to facilitate the production of these publications. The Secretariat of the Venice Commission would be grateful to liaison officers if they could follow these guidelines when preparing their contributions, as this will considerably speed up and help the Secretariat in the production of the Bulletin and CODICES.

Format

The Secretariat would like to encourage liaison officers to use the input mask, which is provided by the Secretariat, but standard text processing software (Word) may also be used for sending the contribution in electronic form (e-mail). Please note that if a Court does not send the contributions in electronic form, these have to be manually retyped by the Secretariat, a procedure which slows down the production of the Bulletin considerably. Liaison officers should always send their contributions along with the full text of the judgments in the original language, and if possible in other languages (via e-mail).

Respect of the presentation norms

The précis are processed automatically by computer macros (programmes) in order to be fed into the CODICES database. It is therefore important to respect the norms for writing zone titles, keywords of the Systematic Thesaurus and the Alphabetical Index (slashes, spacing etc.); these elements will otherwise not be properly recognised by the macros. The same is true for citations of constitutions where links to the texts of the corresponding article are established automatically (see Zone 5 "Summary" below).

Drafting

Please take into account that précis in respect of one country will in most cases be read by people in other countries. Therefore, please draft them in a more simple language than you would normally do for readers in your own country, who probably know the legal background of the case. Thus, please try to write simple sentences using a straightforward grammatical construction and try to avoid having too many relative clauses. Also, please explain, for the foreign reader's sake, legal concepts which are particular to your country.

Liaison officers may monitor the editing and translation process of their contributions and consult the contributions of other courts on either the restricted Interim Bulletin site: <http://www.venice.coe.int/JU/Bulletin> or on the CODICES website: www.codices.coe.int under « Précis being processed ».

Statistics

The statistics are to cover all decisions handed down during the reference period, not only those important decisions which were selected by the liaison officers for publication in the Bulletin. The statistics should be transmitted to the Secretariat even if liaison officers decide not to send any *précis for an issue of the Bulletin because the decisions handed down were not deemed important enough by the liaison officer. If the production of statistics three times a year proves too difficult for liaisons officers, they may send them for the whole year with their contribution to the Bulletin issue 3, i.e. reference period from September to December. The choice of format for the statistics remains with the liaison officer and can follow the structure of the statistics used at the ¹ Liaison officers or correspondents from courts linked to the Venice Commission via an agreement with a regional body (e.g. ACCPUF, SACJF) contribute to the CODICES database. Liaison officers from courts the country of which has member or observer status with the Venice Commission also contribute to the Bulletin.

Court.

ZONES

The précis should be presented in chronological order, using the following eight zones:

Zone 1 "Identification:"

Zone 2 "Keywords of the systematic thesaurus:"

Zone 3 "Keywords of the Alphabetical Index:"

Zone 4 "Headnotes:" (Leitsätze, Massime) (key legal principles that emerge from the case)

Zone 5 "Summary:" (explanation of the legal reasoning, of the factual circumstances, etc)

Zone 6 "Supplementary information:" (optional)

Zone 7 "Cross-references:" (optional)

Zone 8 "Languages:"

Title of zones

- in lowercase with a capital letter at the beginning
- immediately followed by a colon ":"
- No numbers in front of the titles
- If zones 6 or 7 are not used, the title of the zone should be omitted.

If you use the entry mask, use the codes "<IT+>" and "<IT->" to designate the beginning and end of the text to be italicised. Bold and underline are not used for text formatting in the Bulletin.

Please do not use footnotes and do not enter any formatting codes, page breaks, etc, except for Italics because précis are formatted automatically. In Word, do not use any style other than "Normal".

The titles are always in the plural form, even if there is only one "keyword" or one "language".

Please do not use abbreviations. They might be familiar to readers in your country, but could be unknown to the reader of the Bulletin from another country. If you cannot avoid using them, please introduce the abbreviation in brackets following the first occurrence in the précis of the full wording: e.g. "German Democratic Republic (GDR)".

Précis should not exceed 1200 words (total of zones headnotes, summary, supplementary information and cross-references).

Zone 1 - Identification:

Zone 1 contains the identification number of the précis, e.g. "RSA-2009-1-004", (this number is attributed by the Secretariat in Strasbourg), and the references that are needed to identify the decision which is presented. It is divided into eight Sub-Zones:

- a) Country
 - b) Name of the Court
 - c) Chamber (if applicable)
 - d) Date of decision given
 - e) Number of the decision
 - f) Title of the decision (if applicable)
 - g) Official publications
 - h) Non-official publications

Please separate the Sub-Zones a) to g) with space, slash, space “ / ”; and end Sub-Zone h) with a full stop “.”. There is no line break between the Sub-Zones a) to h).

All Sub-Zones should be kept, even if they remain empty. In the following example, zones f), g), h) are empty:

Identification: GRE-2000-3-001

a) Greece / b) Council of State / c) 3rd Section / d) 31.03.2000 / e) 1333/2000 / f) / g) / h).

Date

Under d), only one date can be included. If the précis covers several decisions, use the date of the oldest decision. The date is entered in the following form: day, month, year (DD.MM.YYYY) separated by a dot:

“d) 20.08.2010 / ” corresponds to a decision of 20 August 2010.

The first section, “20”, is always composed of two numbers, which indicates the day, the second one “08” indicates the month, August in this example, and the third one the year, indicated in full “2010”.

Decision number

The indication, under e), of the decision or judgment number should be limited to this number only, not preceded by anything else, such as “Decision”, “Judgment” or “Number”. The entry should simply be limited to the number itself, for example:

“e) 2 BvR 2134/92 /”

When reference is made to two or more decisions or judgments, they should be separated with a comma, e.g. “G 1219-1244/95, G 13 03/95, V 76-101/95, V 110/95”. There should be no “and” before the last number.

Official publications

Please use the citation of the official and non-official publication as stated in document CDL-JU (2001)006. Please inform the Secretariat about any publications that do not yet appear in that document so that it can be updated.

In Zone g), official publications, i.e. in the court's collection or else in the Official Gazette, are cited in the original language and in Italics, followed in brackets by the type of publication (Official Gazette) or (Official Digest).

Example: g) Entscheidungen des Bundesverfassungsgerichts (Official Digest), 89, 155 /

Non-official publications

Non-official publications in the last Sub-Zone h) are cited in the original language and in Italics without translation. The full title of a publication shall be given, no abbreviations. References to academic works (not only complete re-publications of the case) may be included in this Sub-Zone.

Example: h) Europäische Grundrechte-Zeitschrift, 1993, 429; International Legal Materials, 33 (1994), 388.

If there are several publications, these should be separated by a semi-colon “;”. References to publications that appear once the contribution has been sent in, should be communicated to the Secretariat nevertheless in order to be included in the CODICES database.

If you have transmitted the full text in electronic form to the Secretariat, the latter will add a reference to CODICES as a non-official publication in Zone h), e.g. “CODICES (Dutch, French, German)” a decision for which the full text will be available in CODICES in these three languages.

Example: Zone 1 for decision 2 BvR 2134/92 of 12 October 1993 of the Federal Constitutional Court of Germany, will be as follows:

Identification: GER-1993-3-

a) Germany / b) Federal Constitutional Court / c) Second Panel / d) 12.10.1993 / e) 2 BvR 2134/92, 2 BvR 259/92 / f) Maastricht / g) Entscheidungen des Bundesverfassungsgerichts (Official Digest), 89, 155 / h) Europäische Grundrechte-Zeitschrift, 1993, 429; International Legal Materials, 33 (1994), 388; CODICES (German).

Zone 2 - Keywords of the systematic thesaurus:

The Thesaurus is made up of five chapters displayed in an arborescent structure.

Chapter 1 of the Thesaurus is the longest of the five chapters and covers the body of constitutional jurisdiction on which the decision is indexed (Constitutional Court, Supreme Court, Constitutional Council etc.). This Chapter should be used sparingly, as the keywords therein should only be used if a relevant procedural question is discussed by the Court. This Chapter is therefore not to be used to establish statistical data; rather, the Bulletin reader or user of the CODICES database should only look for decisions in this Chapter when the subject of the keyword is an issue in the case. For this reason the indexing of decisions should be done in the reverse order of chapters, i.e. starting with Chapter 5, then 4, then 3, etc.

Chapter 1.1 deals with the structure of the Court in question, 1.2 covers the different applicants, 1.3 speaks of the jurisdiction of the Court. Sub-Chapter 1.3.5 deals with the enactment under review. The various procedural aspects before the Court are found in 1.4. Questions of procedural guarantees before lower instance courts are found in Chapter 5.3.13 of the Thesaurus. If the type of decision to be made is at issue, Chapter 1.5 should be used. Finally, Chapter 1.6 deals with the effects of the decision if they are of interest.

Chapter 2 covers the sources of constitutional law. 2.1 covers national and international sources (treaties, case-law etc), questions of hierarchy between sources are dealt with in 2.2 and the various techniques of interpretation in 2.3.

Chapter 3 covers the general principles of constitutional law, such as democracy (3.3) or the separation of powers (3.4). The principle of equality also appears in 3.21. It should be noted, however, that this keyword should only be used when the principle of equality is not applied to individuals, but to institutions (e.g. municipalities). In that case, the keyword "equality" in Chapter 5.2 should be used.

Chapter 4 covers state institutions, especially the head of state (4.4), parliament (4.5), government (4.6) and courts other than the court with constitutional jurisdiction (4.7). Chapter 4.8 applies to states with a federal or regional structure. Chapter 4.9 deals with the various aspects of elections. Then follow the institutions such as public finances (4.10), armed forces, police forces and secret services (4.11), the Ombudsman (4.12) and other special cases. Chapter 4.17 deals with issues related to the institutions of the European Union.

Chapter 5 is subdivided in accordance with the two United Nations Covenants on Civil and Political Rights (5.3) and Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (5.4). Chapter 5.1 covers general questions such as entitlement to rights (5.1.1) and limitations on fundamental rights (5.1.4). Chapter 5.2 covers the principle of equality applied to individuals. Chapter 5.4 gathers together certain rights known as collective rights.

Footnotes

The footnotes are a very important element in all five chapters of the Thesaurus. They serve to explain the keywords and to advise as to their correct use. In some cases they also contain cross-references to other keywords, which should be used.

Indexing

Another very important element is the indexing of what the reader will see. Usually, it is the précis of the Bulletin on Constitutional Case-Law that are indexed. Thus only the elements appearing in the précis as it is to be published should be indexed, and not subjects which only appear in the full text of the decision. If such a subject is important enough to be indexed in the Thesaurus, then it should also be included in the précis.

Formal structure of the Systematic Thesaurus

The Systematic Thesaurus is subdivided into five chapters, like the branches of a tree (hence the branched, hierarchical structure of the Thesaurus). The major branches of this "tree" are subdivided into ever finer branches, and thus the subjects covered by the branches become more and more specific.

Take for example the word "equality" applied as a fundamental right:

5. Fundamental Rights

... 5.2 Equality

... 5.2.2 Criteria of distinction 5.2.2.1 Gender 5.2.2.2 Race

When indexing, a complete "chain of keywords" must always be given without omitting intermediate elements. For example, to indicate a decision dealing with discrimination based on gender:

"5.2.2.1 Fundamental Rights – Equality – Criteria of distinction – Gender."

If there is no last term in the chain that corresponds to the contents of a decision, a chain of keywords in the Systematic Thesaurus may, however, be shortened to index for example a decision based on a criterion of distinction that is not given in the Thesaurus, such as an arbitrary date:

“5.2.2 Fundamental rights - Civil and political rights - Equality - Criteria of distinction.”

In this case the criterion should be added to the list of keywords in the Alphabetical Index. However, as stated above, you should not make shortcuts within chains or mix keywords from different chains.

The keyword chain always begins with a capital letter and ends with a full stop “.”.

The data input mask automatically inserts the correct numbering of the keywords. However, when you use text processing software for the preparation of the contribution of the currently valid version of the Thesaurus, please add the number of the Thesaurus keyword manually (for example 5.3.13.12). In order to avoid confusion, please note the version of the thesaurus that you have been using at the top of your contribution, e.g. “Thesaurus V21”.

Examples of keyword chains

I. Wrong (shortcut of keyword chain):

5.3.13.15 Fundamental Rights – Impartiality – Civil and political rights.

Correct:

5.3.13.15 Fundamental Rights – Civil and political rights – Procedural safeguards and fair trial – Impartiality.

II. Wrong (joinder of two keyword chains):

5.3.13.15 Fundamental Rights – Civil and political rights – Procedural safeguards and fair trial – Independence – Impartiality.

Correct:

5.3.13.14 Fundamental Rights – Civil and political rights – Procedural safeguards and fair trial – Independence.

5.3.13.15 Fundamental Rights – Civil and political rights – Procedural safeguards and fair trial – Impartiality.

III. Wrong (invention of keyword):

5.3.31 Fundamental Rights – Civil and political rights – Right to respect for one's honour and reputation – Libel.

Correct:

5.3.31 Fundamental Rights – Civil and political rights – Right to respect for one's honour and reputation.

And add the use of a separate keyword “Libel” in the alphabetical index.

Zone 3 - Keywords of the Alphabetical Index:

The Alphabetical Index is used to index concepts that are not found in the Systematic Thesaurus, which only covers constitutional law issues. The Alphabetical Index thus serves for the indexing of other branches of law (civil, criminal etc.) as well as to refine or narrow down a keyword of the Thesaurus (see the "libel" example above). It is used especially to index legal keywords, but may also cover factual matters such as "housing" or "forest".

Liaison officers are free to add new keywords to the Alphabetical Index. It is nonetheless advisable to use keywords that have been used previously. The computerised entry mask suggests a list of such keywords. The mask also includes a list of cross-references to other keywords that should be used (for example, not "termination of pregnancy" but "abortion") as well as cross-references to the Systematic Thesaurus (for example, do not use "Police" in the index, but rather "4.11.2 Institutions - Armed forces, police forces and secret services - Police forces" in the Thesaurus). Some cross-references are obligatory, the referring term must not be used whereas other cross-references are optional and inform the reader that a similar keyword may exist.

Whenever possible, plural forms should be avoided for the keywords of the Alphabetical Index.

A repetition of keywords of the Systematic Thesaurus should be avoided, but elements that appear in the footnotes of the Thesaurus may be used in the Alphabetical Index.

Keywords may consist of more than one word, but their total length must not exceed 80 characters including spaces between words. The keywords should be separated by space, slash, space " / " and begin with a capital letter. The list of keywords ends with a full stop ".".

The most important element of the keyword should be placed first followed by a comma. Prepositions at the end of such inverted keywords are deleted:

Example: "Administration of local communities" becomes

"Local community, administration" (the keywords are inverted to place the most important element first; the preposition "of" is deleted and the keyword is singular)

These rules do not apply, however, to composite terms designating a well-defined legal concept.

Example: "Free movement of persons" is correct.

Some keywords are used to group topics that belong together e.g. media, election, education, housing. Therefore do not use "Radio, licence" but "Media, radio, licence".

Zone 4 - Headnotes:

Zone 4 contains a short summary with the headnotes (Leitsätze, Massime), key legal principles that emerge from the case. They should not contain extracts of the decision, but a summary of the main contents. Each legal issue considered in the decision should be summarised in one paragraph. This information should be abstract and not contain any reference to the particular facts of the case. Consequently, there should be no mention of "The Constitutional Court decided that ...". The main legal elements of the case should be briefly presented in the form of full sentences. A mere enumeration of points raised should find its place in the Systematic Thesaurus or in the Alphabetical Index.

As a general rule, headnotes should indicate the content of legal norms (e.g. "freedom of expression"). Their citation (e.g. "Article 3 of the Constitution") may be added. For this citation, see "Zone 5 - Summary" below.

Example: "The right to respect for one's private and family life, guaranteed under Article 22 of the Constitution and Article 8 ECHR, is not absolute."

Zone 5 - Summary:

This Zone should briefly describe the main facts of the case, the procedure followed, details on who appealed to the Court; what the law under scrutiny dealt with; the arguments put forward by the petitioner; the Court's assessment of the petitioner's arguments; the reasons given by the Court for its decision, including what factors it considered to be decisive in the case and why the decision was taken, and, if available, information on dissenting opinions. Additional information on the legal reasoning (ratio decidendi) behind the decision can be given without, however, repeating the headnotes.

The whole précis must not exceed 1200 words (this limit applies to the total of the zones headnotes, summary, supplementary information and references).

Liaison officers are encouraged, when appropriate, to systematically separate the cases into I. facts (including case history) and II. arguments and conclusion of the Court (see for example, EST-2009-2-007 in the appendix). A Section III may be included for dissenting and concurring opinions, which should not appear in Zone 6 – Supplementary information (see below).

The harmonising of citations is very important, because it allows for the automatic creation of links from the précis to the relevant texts. The following rules should be followed:

1. Quoting legal texts

Please refrain from repeatedly citing your Constitution or your Court in full throughout the text as in most cases it is clear from the context which Constitution or Court you are referring to, e.g. not "the Constitutional Court of the Republic of XY" or "the Constitution of XY" but rather "the Constitutional Court" and "the Constitution". Of course, in cases where there is the possibility of confusion with other Constitutional Courts or Constitutions, please cite them accordingly. Furthermore, please do not refer to "our" Court or "our Constitution". As the précis become part of CODICES, please do not refer to "now" in time, but rather to "at the time of the decision".

When quoting a legal text please use the standard formula: e.g. "the Law on the Protection of Personal Data (hereinafter, the "Law")". The same should also apply to quoting of a State body, e.g. "the Ministry of Foreign Affairs (hereinafter, the "Ministry")".

2. Quoting in the original language

If you wish to use the name of a national institution in the original language, cite it at the first occurrence in the précis between brackets and in Italics preceded by the generic term of this institution (e.g. "Parliament (Nationalrat)". In the following citations within the same précis, please use the generic term only (e.g. "Parliament"). The titles of laws should not be indicated in the original language.

3. Quoting of articles

When you cite articles, do not use the abbreviation "Art.". Please, write "Article" in full.

On the other hand, sub-divisions of articles should be referred to in the following way:

"Article 3.2.a" rather than "Article 3, section 2, sub-section a"

"According to Article 1.3" rather than "according to Article 1 item 3"

Only the citation of specific sentences remains in full, for example:

"Second Sentence of Article 1.3.3 of the Constitution".

For legal texts, in particular internal legislation, which do not use articles, "Section" or the symbol "§" can be used: (Note that in French "section" or "§" will be translated as "article"):

Example: « § 194.2 of the Procedural Code of the Canton of Bern ».

A series of Articles shall be referred to in the following form:

"Articles 17, 32, 69 and 117 of the Constitution".

References to Articles of the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, its Protocols and Articles of the Treaty establishing the European Community should be made using the abbreviations "ECHR" "Protocol ECHR" and "EC":

"Article 6.3 ECHR", "Article 1 Protocol 1 ECHR", or "Article 177 EC".

Do not use the prepositions "of the" before "ECHR" but "ECHR" only.

Zone 6 - Supplementary information:

Zone 6 contains additional information, which in contrast to Zone 5, is not part of the decision itself. Separate opinions are part of the decision and should figure in Zone 5-Summary. Zone 6 is optional and may be used to put the reported cases in context, for example by using such entries as "as a consequence of this decision, the Law on ... has been amended" or "settled case-law". Liaison officers might also wish to give information about the general political context of a decision.

Zone 6 may also be used to indicate the articles of the Constitution or other legislation referred to in the decision.

Example: "Legal norms referred to:

Articles 3, 5, 6 and 80 of the Constitution".

Please do not use abbreviations for the legislation.

Zone 7 - Cross-references:

Zone 7 can be used for cross-references to decisions of the same court or other courts, whether published or not. If a decision has been published in the Bulletin, it should be cited in the following way:

Example: "decision 94-354 DC of 11.01.1995, Bulletin 1995/1 [FRA-1995-1-003]".

The page number was no longer included as from Bulletin 1995/1, which was the first Bulletin to use identification numbers. The use of brackets for cross-references will ensure that a link is automatically established in the CODICES database.

Zone 8 - Languages:

Zone 8 shall indicate all languages in which a decision is available, followed, if appropriate, by the mention "(translation by the Court)". References to published translations in Zone 1 h) are possible.

Example: "Croatian, English (translation by the Court), German (translation, see above zone h)".

Headnotes:

The settling of disputes in the protest committee of the Public Procurement Office, which is an executive body, is not unconstitutional in itself, but the exclusion of administrative courts from the adjudication of such disputes does not meet the principle pursuant to which all court cases start in the courts of first instance, and restricts the constitutional competence of the judicial power.

Every court, when adjudicating a case, must review the constitutionality of applicable law, if relevant doubts have arisen. They must also do this at their own instigation, rather than wait to be prompted by parties to proceedings.

Summary:

I. On 7 March 2008 the protest committee of the Public Procurement Office (hereinafter "the protest committee") upheld a complaint by a corporation AS KPK Teedehitus (hereinafter "the corporation"), but did not allow the application for the award of legal aid costs. The corporation filed an appeal with the Tallinn Circuit Court, requesting the repeal of the protest committee's decision to the extent that it failed to award the legal aid costs.

The Tallinn Circuit Court upheld the corporation's appeal in part, annulling the protest committee's decision to the extent that it did not satisfy the application by the corporation for the award of legal aid costs. The circuit court declared unconstitutional and did not apply Article 129.2 of the Public Procurement Act (hereinafter "the PPrA"), to the extent that it makes no provision for somebody lodging a complaint to have recourse to the courts where the protest committee has turned down their application for the award of legal aid costs, and Article 126.6 PPrA to the extent that it does not allow for the award of legal aid costs incurred in proceedings before the protest committee when the complaint is upheld. The court delivered the judgment to the Supreme Court, thus initiating a constitutional review proceeding.

II. When examining the case referred to it by the Constitutional Review Chamber, the Supreme Court en banc had concerns that in addition to the provisions declared unconstitutional by the Tallinn Circuit Court, Article 129.1 PPrA could be unconstitutional too. The Supreme Court justified its "activism" by referring to the second sentence of Article 15.1 of the Constitution and Article 15.2 of the Constitution. It follows from these articles that courts, when adjudicating a case, must review the constitutionality of applicable law, if relevant doubts have arisen. They must also do so on their own initiative and not wait for parties to proceedings to prompt them. Consequently, a court adjudicating a case, as well as the Supreme Court as the court of constitutional review, is also competent to review the constitutionality of provisions the constitutionality of which has not been questioned by parties to the proceedings. Therefore, the Supreme Court must verify whether the request for constitutional review was submitted by a competent court, person or body. Within concrete norm control, it is the court which is entitled to adjudicate the main dispute that has the competence to initiate a constitutional review.

In the present case, which served as the basis of the constitutional review matter, it was Article 129.1 PPrA that gave the circuit court (as an appellate court) the competence to adjudicate the appeal against the decision of the protest committee. If this provision was unconstitutional and did not exist, the circuit court should have refused to accept the appeal and the appeal against the protest committee's decision should have been adjudicated by an administrative court instead. The Supreme Court expressed concerns over the conformity of Article 129.1 PPrA with the provisions on the organisation of the judicial system as established in Chapter XIII of the Constitution. These provisions describe the procedure for fair and effective protection of individual rights, the existence of which is one of the characteristics of a state based on the rule of law. The Supreme Court found that it had the obligation to examine this conformity.

The institutional framework for the resolution of public procurement disputes regulated by Council Directives 89/665/EEC of 21 December 1989 and 92/13/EEC of 25 February 1992 does not preclude a review of constitutionality of Article 129.1 PPrA. These directives leave member states with a wide margin of appreciation as to the choice of institutions competent to resolve public procurement disputes and the establishment of the review procedure. In exercising this right the legislator is bound by the Estonian Constitution. The legislation should, in addition to the EU law, be in conformity with the Estonian Constitution.

As to the constitutionality of Article 129.1 PPrA, the Supreme Court was of the opinion that it was in conformity with the procedural requirement arising from Article 104.2.14 of the Constitution, as it was passed by a majority of the membership of the Parliament, as is obligatory for procedural laws. The Court noted, however, that in the interests of clarity it would be preferable if this regulation were to be found directly in the legislation regulating court procedure.

However, Article 129.1 PPrA was in conflict with Article 149.1 and 149.2 of the Constitution and with the first sentence of Article 146 of the Constitution in conjunction with Article 4 of the Constitution. The obligation of the circuit courts to adjudicate public procurement disputes as a court of first instance is not in conformity with the constitutional status of circuit courts as appellate courts. Furthermore, this provision necessitates a review of protest committee decisions by way of appeal proceedings. The protest committee is not a court of first instance, but an administrative authority and not a part of the judicial system described in Article 148 of the Constitution. Its members are not appointed for life. Administrative proceedings conducted in the protest committee are not comparable to judicial proceedings as regards the procedural guarantees of parties to the proceedings. The exclusion of administrative courts from the adjudication of public procurement disputes does not meet the principle pursuant to which all court cases start in the courts of first instance. An Act which excludes administrative courts from the adjudication of concrete court cases, so that such cases are heard by an administrative agency instead, restricts the constitutional competence of the judicial power.

In view of the above the Supreme Court en banc declared Article 129.1 PPrA unconstitutional and invalid. Due to the unconstitutionality, the circuit court was not competent to review the appeal filed against the decision of the protest committee; neither was it competent to submit the request for constitutional review. In this situation the Supreme Court en banc could not review the request to review the constitutionality of the provisions declared unconstitutional in the judgment of the Tallinn Circuit Court.

III. Out of eighteen justices, five delivered two dissenting opinions. The five dissenting judges disagreed with excessive activism of the majority of the Supreme Court en banc. They found that the Supreme Court could not go beyond the provisions that are relevant to the adjudication of the case. By declaring Article 129.1 PPrA unconstitutional, the Supreme Court en banc ignored the requirement of relevance of provisions (which is not permissible from a procedural angle in the context of concrete norm control). The declaration of unconstitutionality and invalidity of Article 129.1 PPrA substantially damaged the interests and rights of the party in whose interests the constitutional review proceeding was initiated. The issue of legal aid costs in the protest committee, for the resolution of which the person had recourse to the court in the first place, remained unresolved.

Supplementary information:

The judgment also prompted discussion amongst legal writers.

It has resulted in public procurement disputes now being settled in four instances, as the provisions determining the protest committee of the Public Procurement Office as an obligatory pre-trial dispute resolution body remain in force.
