In the Name of God, the Merciful, the Compassionate

PREAMBLE

We, the representatives of the Tunisian people, members of the National Constituent Assembly,

Taking pride in the struggle of our people to gain independence and build the state, to free ourselves from tyranny, to affirm our free will and to achieve the objectives of the revolution for freedom and dignity, the revolution of December 17, 2010 through January 14, 2011, with loyalty to the blood of our virtuous martyrs, to the sacrifices of Tunisian men and women over the course of generations, and breaking with injustice, inequity, and corruption.

Expressing our people's commitment to the teachings of Islam, to their spirit of openness and tolerance, to human values and the highest principles of universal human rights, inspired by the heritage of our civilisation, accumulated over the travails of our history, from our enlightened reformist movements that are based on the foundations of our Islamic-Arab identity and on the acquisitions of human civilisation, and adhering to the national gains achieved by our people;

With a view to building a participatory, democratic, republican regime, in the framework of a civil state founded on the law and on the sovereignty of the people, exercised through the peaceful alternation of power through free elections. A political system founded on the principle of the separation and balance of powers, which guarantees the freedom of association in conformity with the principles of pluralism, an impartial administration, and good governance, which are the foundations of political competition, a regime that guarantees respect for human rights and freedoms, independence of the judiciary, equality of rights and duties between all citizens, male and female, and equality between all regions;

Based on the elevated status of humankind and desirous of consolidating our cultural and civilizational affiliation to the Arab and Muslim nation, building on our national unity that is based on citizenship, fraternity, solidarity, and social justice. Committed to strengthening Maghreb unity as a step towards achieving Arab unity, towards complementarity with the Muslim and with the African peoples, and towards cooperation with all the peoples of the world. Desirous of supporting all victims of injustice, wherever they are, defending the peoples' right to determine their own destiny, to support all just liberation movements, at the forefront of which is the movement for the liberation of Palestine; and opposing all forms of colonisation and of racism;

Being aware of the necessity of contributing to the preservation of a healthy environment that guarantees the sustainability of our natural resources and bequeathing a secure life for future generations. Realising the will of the people to be the makers of their own history. Believing in science, work, and creativity as noble human values. Seeking always to be pioneers, aspiring to contribute to the development of civilization, on the basis of the independence of national decision-making, world peace, and human solidarity;

We, in the name of the Tunisian people, with the help of God, draft this Constitution.

Chapter One – General Principles

Article 1

Tunisia is a free, independent, sovereign state; its religion is Islam, its language Arabic, and its system is republican.

This article cannot be amended.

Article 2

Tunisia is a civil state based on citizenship, the will of the people, and the supremacy of law.

This article cannot be amended.

Article 3

The people are sovereign and the source of authority, which is exercised through the peoples' representatives and by referendum.

Article 4

The flag of the Tunisian Republic is red and bears in its midst a white circle in which is inscribed a five-pointed star surrounded by a red crescent, as provided for by law.

The national anthem of the Tunisian Republic is "Humat Al-Hima" (Defenders of the Homeland), in accordance with the provisions defined by law.

The motto of the Tunisian Republic is: freedom, dignity, justice, and order.

Article 5

The Republic of Tunisia is a part of the Arab Maghreb and works towards achieving its unity and takes all measures to ensure its realisation.

Article 6

The state is the guardian of religion. It guarantees freedom of conscience and belief, and the free exercise of religious practices and the neutrality of mosques and places of worship from all partisan instrumentalisation.

The state undertakes to disseminate the values of moderation and tolerance and the protection of the sacred, and the prohibition of all violations thereof. It undertakes equally to prohibit and fight against calls for Takfir and the incitement of violence and hatred.

Article 7

The family is the nucleus of society and the state shall protect it.

The conservation and rational use of water is a duty of the state and of society.

Article 45

The state guarantees the right to a healthy and balanced environment and the right to participate in the protection of the climate.

The state shall provide the necessary means to eradicate pollution of the environment.

Article 46

The state commits to protect women's accrued rights and work to strengthen and develop those rights.

The state guarantees the equality of opportunities between women and men to have access to all levels of responsibility in all domains.

The state works to attain parity between women and men in elected Assemblies.

The state takes all necessary measures in order to eradicate violence against women.

Article 47

Children are guaranteed the rights to dignity, health, care, education, and teaching from their parents and the state.

The state must provide all types of protection to all children without discrimination and in accordance with their best interests

Article 48

The state shall protect persons with disabilities from all forms of discrimination.

Every disabled citizen shall have the right to benefit, according to the nature of the disability, from all measures that will assure their full integration into society, and the state shall take all necessary measures to achieve this.

Article 49

The limitations that can be imposed on the exercise of the rights and freedoms guaranteed in this Constitution will be established by law, without compromising their essence. Any such limitations can only to be put in place for reasons necessary to a civil and democratic state and with the aim of protecting the rights of others, or based on the requirements of public order, national defence, public health or public morals, and provided there is proportionality between these restrictions and the objective sought.

Judicial authorities ensure that rights and freedoms are protected from all violations.

There can be no amendment to the Constitution that undermines the human rights and freedoms guaranteed in this Constitution.

Chapter Three – Legislative Authority

Article 50

The people exercise legislative power through their representatives in the Assembly of the Representatives of the People or through referendum.

Article 51

The seat of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People shall be located in the Capital. Nevertheless, in exceptional circumstances, the Assembly may sit in any other place within the Republic.

Article 52

The Assembly of the Representatives of the People enjoys financial and administrative independence within the framework of the state budget.

The Assembly of the Representatives of the People shall determine its rules of procedure and ratify them by an absolute majority of the members of the Assembly.

The state shall put at the disposition of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People the necessary human and material resources to allow for members of the Assembly to fulfil their obligations.

Article 53

Every Tunisian voter who has acquired Tunisian nationality at least ten years prior and is no younger than twenty three years of age on the day of candidacy is eligible to be elected to the Assembly of the Representatives of the People, provided that they are not prohibited from holding such a position as specified by the law.

Article 54

Every Tunisian citizen aged eighteen years shall be deemed a voter in accordance with the conditions established by the electoral law.

Article 55

Members of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People shall be elected by universal, free, direct, secret, fair and transparent suffrage, in accordance with the electoral law.

The electoral law guarantees the voting and representation rights to the Assembly of the Representatives of the People for Tunisians resident overseas.

Article 56

The Assembly of the Representatives of the People shall be elected for a mandate of five years, during the last sixty days of the parliamentary mandate.

In the event of inability to hold elections as a result of imminent danger, the mandate of the Assembly shall be extended according to the provisions of a law.

Article 57

The Assembly of the Representatives of the People shall hold an ordinary session each year starting in October and ending in July. The first session of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People shall begin within fifteen days following the proclamation of the definitive results of the legislative elections, at the request of the President of the outgoing Assembly.

In the event that the beginning of the first session of the term of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People coincides with its recess, an extraordinary session shall be held in order to proceed to a vote of confidence in the government.

During its recess, the Assembly of the Representatives of the People shall convene in an extraordinary session upon the request of the President of the Republic, the Head of Government, or one-third of its members, to examine a specific agenda.

Article 58

Every member in the Assembly of the Representatives of the People shall, upon assuming their functions, swear the following oath:

“I swear, by God Almighty, that I will diligently serve the nation, that I will respect the provisions of the Constitution, and that I will bear full allegiance to Tunisia.”

Article 59

The Assembly of the Representatives of the People shall in its first session elect a President from amongst its members.

The Assembly of the Representatives of the People shall form permanent and special committees. Their composition and the sharing of responsibilities within the committees shall be determined on the basis of proportional representation.

The Assembly of the Representatives of the People may form committees of enquiry. All authorities shall assist such committees of enquiry in undertaking their missions.

Article 60

The opposition is an essential component of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People. It shall enjoy the rights that enable it to undertake its parliamentary duties and is guaranteed an adequate and effective representation in all bodies of the Assembly, as well as in its internal and external activities.

The opposition is assigned the presidency of the Finance Committee, and rapporteur of the External Relations Committee.

It has the right to establish and head a committee of enquiry annually.

The opposition's duties include active and constructive participation in parliamentary work.

Article 61

Voting in the Assembly of the Representatives of the People is personal and may not be delegated.

Article 62

Legislative initiative is carried out with legislative propositions made by no less than ten members, or with draft laws submitted by the President of the Republic, or by the Head of Government.

The Head of the Government is the only authority entitled to present draft laws related to the ratification of treaties and draft budget laws.

Draft laws presented by the President or the Head of Government shall be given priority.

Article 63

Legislative propositions and amendments presented by members of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People are not admissible if they affect the financial balances fixed in the finance law.

Article 64

The Assembly of the Representatives of the People shall adopt draft organic laws by an absolute majority of all members, and ordinary draft laws by a majority of members who are present, provided that such a majority represents no less than one-third of the members of the Assembly.

No draft organic law shall be presented for debate to the plenary session of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People until at least fifteen days have passed since its submission to the competent parliamentary committee.

Article 65

Laws relating to the following areas are deemed ordinary laws:

- Creation of public institutions and facilities and the provisions regulating their sale.
- Nationality.
- Civil and commercial obligations.
- Procedures before various types of courts.
- Definition of felonies and misdemeanours and the corresponding punishments applicable, in addition to violations resulting in a penalty involving deprivation of freedom.
- General pardon.
- Regulation of taxation rules, percentages and procedures for collection thereof.
- Regulations on issuance of currency
- Loans and financial obligations of the state.
- Regulation of senior public positions
- Declaration of earnings
- Basic guarantees given to civil and military public employees.
- System for the ratification of treaties.
- Laws of finance and closing of the state budget, and the ratification of development plans.
- The fundamental principles of property laws, real property rights, education, scientific research, culture, public health, the environment, land and urban planning, energy, employment rights, and social security.

Laws relating to the following areas are deemed organic laws:

- Approval of treaties.
- Organization of justice and the judiciary.
- Organization of information, press and publication.
- Organization and financing of parties, trade unions, associations, and professional organisations and bodies.

- Organization of the national army.
- Organization of the internal security forces and customs.
- Election law.
- Extension of the term of the parliament according to the provisions of article 56.
- Extension of the presidential term according to the provisions of article 75.
- Freedoms and human rights.
- Personal status law.
- Fundamental duties of citizenship.
- Local government
- Organization of constitutional commissions.
- The organic budget law.

All matters which do not form part of the domain of laws shall be in the domain of general regulatory authority.

Article 66

The law determines the state's resources and its expenses in conformity with the provisions set out in the organic law concerning the budget.

The Assembly of the Representatives of the People shall adopt draft finance laws and budget closure legislation in accordance with the provisions of the organic law on the budget.

The draft finance law shall be presented to the Assembly no later than October 15 and it shall be adopted no later than December 10.

The President of the Republic may resubmit the draft finance law to the Assembly for a second reading within two days following its ratification by the Assembly. In this case, the Assembly meets to deliberate a second time within three days of the exercise of this right of resubmission.

During the three days following the adoption of the draft law on second reading after resubmission, or after the expiry of the period for the exercise of the right of resubmission, parties mentioned in the first section of article 120 can contest the constitutionality of the provisions of the draft finance law before the Constitutional Court. The Court shall issue its decision within five days.

If the Constitutional Court rules that the draft law is unconstitutional, it communicates its decision to the President of the Republic, who in turn communicates it to the President of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People. These procedures shall be completed within two days from the date of the court's decision.

The Assembly shall adopt the draft finance law within three days following its receipt of the decision of the Constitutional Court.

If the constitutionality of the draft law is confirmed or if the law is voted in a second reading after its resubmission to the Assembly, once the period for claims of unconstitutionality or for the exercise of the presidential right of resubmission have expired, the President of the Republic promulgates the finance law within a period of two days.

In all cases the promulgation shall take place before December 31.

If the draft finance law is not adopted by December 31, the law can be implemented in terms of expenditures by renewable presidential order, in three months tranches. Revenues shall continue to be collected in accordance with the laws in force.

Article 67

Commercial treaties and treaties related to international organisations, to borders of the state, to financial obligations of the state, to the status of individuals, or to dispositions of a legislative character shall be submitted to the Assembly of the Representatives of the People for ratification.

Treaties enter into application only upon their ratification.

Article 68

No member of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People may be prosecuted through civil or criminal proceedings, arrested or tried for opinions or propositions presented or for work performed in relation to his/her parliamentary functions.

Article 69

If a member of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People asserts criminal immunity in writing, he/she may not be prosecuted or arrested during his/her term of office for a criminal charge unless immunity is lifted. In the event of being apprehended while committing a crime, the member may be arrested. The President of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People shall immediately be notified and the member shall be released if the Bureau of the Assembly so requests.

Article 70

In the event of the dissolution of the Assembly, the President of the Republic may, with the agreement of the Head of Government, issue decree-laws which shall be submitted for ratification to the Assembly of the Representatives of the People during its next ordinary session.

The Assembly of the Representatives of the People may, with the agreement of three-fifths of its members, authorise by law for a limited period not exceeding two months, and for a specific purpose, the Head of Government to issue decree-laws of a legislative character, to be submitted for ratification to the Assembly immediately after the end of the period of authorisation.

The electoral system cannot be amended by decree-laws.

Chapter Four – The Executive Authority

Article 71

Executive authority is exercised by the President of the Republic and by a government which is presided by the head of the government.

Section One – The President of the Republic

Article 72

The President of the Republic is the Head of State and the symbol of its unity. He guarantees its independence and continuity, and ensures respect of the Constitution.

Article 73

The official seat of the Presidency of the Republic is Tunis. In exceptional circumstances, the seat may be transferred to any other location in the Republic.

Article 74

Every male and female voter who holds Tunisian nationality since birth, whose religion is Islam shall have the right to stand for election to the position of President of the Republic. On the day of filing the application for candidacy, the candidate must be a minimum of 35 years old.

If the candidate has a nationality other than the Tunisian nationality, he or she must submit an application committing to abandon the other nationality if elected president.

The candidate must have the support of a number of members of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People or heads of elected local authority councils, or of registered voters, as specified by the election law.

Article 75

The President of the Republic is elected for a five-year term during the last sixty day period of the presidential term by means of universal, free, direct, secret, fair, and transparent elections, by an absolute majority of votes cast.

In the event that no candidate achieves such a majority in the first round, a second round shall be organised during the two weeks following the announcement of the definitive results of the first round. Only the two candidates having won the highest number of votes during the first round may stand for election in the second round.

In the event of the death of one of the candidates during the first or second round, nominations shall be reopened and new dates for elections shall be set within no more than forty-five days. Withdrawal of candidates from the first or second round will not affect the election.

In the event of failure to hold the presidential elections as a result of imminent danger, the term of presidency shall be extended through passage of a law.

No-one can occupy the post of presidency for more than two full terms, whether consecutive or separate. In the case of resignation, the term counts as a full term.

The constitution may not be amended to increase the number or the length of presidential terms.

Article 76

The elected President of the Republic shall swear the following oath before the Assembly of the Representatives of the People:

“I do solemnly swear by God Almighty to maintain the independence of Tunisia and the integrity of its territory, to respect its Constitution and legislation, to safeguard its interests, and to remain absolutely loyal to it”.

The President of the Republic may not combine a partisan position with that of President.

Article 77

The President of the Republic is responsible for representing the state. He/she is responsible for determining the general state orientations in the domains of defence, foreign relations and national security related to protecting the state and the national territory from all internal and external threats, after consultation with the Head of Government.

He/she is also responsible for:

- Dissolving the Assembly of the Representatives of the People in accordance with the Constitution's provisions. The Assembly shall not be dissolved during the six months following granting confidence to the government, or the six months following legislative elections, or during the last six months of the presidential or parliamentary terms.
- Chairing the National Security Council, to which the Head of Government and President of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People are invited.
- Being the Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces.
- Declaring war and establishing peace, upon the approval by a majority of three-fifths of the members of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People, as well as sending troops abroad with the approval of the President of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People and of the Head of Government; the Assembly shall deliberate on the matter within a period not exceeding sixty days from the date of the decision to send troops.
- Taking measures that are required by a state of emergency, and to publicly announce such measures in accordance with article 80.
- Ratifying treaties and ordering their publication.
- The right of clemency.
- Issuing special pardons.

Article 78

The President of the Republic undertakes the following appointments through presidential orders:

- Appointing and dismissing the General Mufti of the Tunisian Republic.
- Appointing and dismissing individuals with respect to senior positions in the Presidency of the Republic, and dependent institutions. These senior positions are determined by law.
- Appointing and dismissing individuals with respect to senior military and diplomatic positions, and positions related to national security, after consultation with the Head of Government. These senior positions are determined by law.
- Appointing the governor of the Central Bank upon proposal of the Head of Government after approval of the appointment by an absolute majority of members of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People. The governor shall be dismissed in the same manner, or upon the request of a third of members of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People and by approval of the majority of the members.

Article 79

The President of the Republic may address the Assembly of the Representatives of the People.

Article 80

In the event of imminent danger threatening the nation's institutions or the security or independence of the country, and hampering the normal functioning of the state, the President of the Republic may take any measures necessitated by the exceptional circumstances, after consultation with the Head of Government and the President of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People and informing the President of the Constitutional Court. The President shall announce the measures in a statement to the people.

The measures shall guarantee, at the earliest possibility, a return to the normal functioning of state institutions and services. The Assembly of the Representatives of the People shall be deemed to be in a state of continuous session throughout such a period. In this situation, the President of the Republic cannot dissolve the Assembly of the Representatives of the People and a motion of censure against the government cannot be presented.

Thirty days after the entry into force of these measures, and at any time thereafter, the President of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People or thirty of the members thereof shall be entitled to apply to the Constitutional Court with a view to verifying whether or not the circumstances remain exceptional. The Court shall rule upon and publicly issue its decision within a period not exceeding fifteen days.

These measures cease to be in force as soon as the circumstances justifying their implementation no longer apply. The President of the Republic shall address a message to the people to this effect.

Article 81

The President of the Republic shall promulgate laws and assure their publication in the Official Gazette of the Tunisian Republic within a period of not more than four days from:

1. The end of the deadline to challenge unconstitutionality and the deadline to return, but neither of these occurred.
2. The end of the deadline to return after issuing a decision of constitutionality, or after the mandatory transmission of the draft law to the President of the Republic in accordance with the final paragraph of Article 121.
3. The end of the deadline to challenge unconstitutionality of a draft law that was returned from the President of the Republic and its ratification in a modified version by the Assembly of the Representatives of the People.
4. The second approval, without amendment, of a draft law, after return, by the Assembly of the Representatives of the People, without being subject to a challenge of unconstitutionality after the first ratification, or the issuance of a decision confirming its constitutionality, or the mandatory transmission of the draft law to the President of the Republic in accordance with the final paragraph of Article 121.

5. The court decides a law is constitutional, or after the mandatory transmission of the draft law to the President of the Republic in accordance with the final paragraph of Article 121, if it was returned from the President of the Republic and was approved, in a modified version, by the Assembly.

With the exception of draft constitutional laws, the President of the Republic has the right to return the draft with explanation to the Assembly to discuss it again within five days from:

1. The end of the deadline to challenge constitutionality according to provisions of the first section of Article 120,
2. Issuance of a decision on its constitutionality or when the Constitutional Court abandons it according to provisions of the third paragraph of Article 121, in the case of challenging the meanings included in the first section of Article 120.

Upon return, the ratification of ordinary draft laws requires the approval of the absolute majority of the members of the Assembly, while draft organic laws require the approval of three fifths of the members.

Article 82

The President of the Republic may, in exceptional circumstances, within the deadlines for return of a draft law, submit for a referendum, draft laws related to ratification of treaties, to freedoms and human rights, or personal status, which were adopted by the Assembly of the Representatives of the People. The submission to referendum shall be deemed a waiver of the right to return the draft law to the Assembly.

If the result of the referendum is the ratification of the draft law, the President of the Republic shall promulgate it and order to publish it within a period not exceeding ten days from the date of announcement of the results of the referendum.

The electoral law shall regulate the procedures for conducting the referendum and announcing its results.

Article 83

The President of the Republic may, in the event of a temporary inability to perform his/her tasks, temporarily delegate his/her powers to the Head of Government for a maximum period of 30 days, renewable once.

The President of the Republic shall inform the President of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People of the temporary delegation of powers.

Article 84

In the event of the position of President of the Republic becoming temporarily vacant for reasons that prevent the President of the Republic from delegating his/her powers, the Constitutional Court shall promptly meet and declare the temporary vacancy of the office, and the Head of Government shall immediately be invested with the responsibilities of the President of the Republic. The period of temporary vacancy may not exceed sixty days.

Should the temporary vacancy exceed the sixty-day period, or if the President of the Republic submits a written resignation to the President of the Constitutional Court, or in the event of his/her death or absolute incapacity, or for any other reason that causes a permanent vacancy, the Constitutional Court shall promptly meet and acknowledge the permanent vacancy and notify the President of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People who shall, on a temporary basis, immediately undertake the tasks of the President of the Republic for a duration of no less than forty-five days and no more than ninety days.

Article 85

In the event of permanent vacancy, the interim President of the Republic shall take the oath set out in the Constitution before the Assembly of the Representatives of the People, and in case it is necessary before the Assembly's Bureau or before the Constitutional Court in the event that the Assembly has been dissolved.

Article 86

The interim President of the Republic, during the temporary or permanent vacancy of the office, exercises the presidential responsibilities. He/she shall not be entitled to propose amending the Constitution, call for a referendum or dissolve the Assembly of the Representatives of the People.

During the period of interim presidency, a new President of the Republic shall be elected for a full presidential term. No motion of censure against the government may be presented during the period of interim presidency.

Article 87

The President of the Republic enjoys judicial immunity during his/her mandate. All statutes of limitations and other deadlines are suspended, and judicial procedures can only be recommenced after the end of his/her term.

The President of the Republic cannot be prosecuted for acts that were carried out in the context of performing his/her functions.

Article 88

The Assembly of the Representatives of the People may, through the initiative of a majority of its members, present a motion to bring an end to the President of the Republic's mandate for a grave violation of the Constitution. Such a motion must be approved by two-thirds of members. In such an event, the matter is referred to the Constitutional Court for decision by majority of two-thirds of its members. In the event of condemnation, the Constitutional Court orders removal of the President of the Republic from office, without excluding eventual criminal prosecution when necessary. Where the President has been removed from office under these circumstances, he/she is not entitled to run in any subsequent elections.

Section Two – The Government

Article 89

The government shall be composed of a Head of Government, Ministers, and secretaries of state selected by the Head of Government, and in the case of the Ministers of Foreign Affairs and Defence, in consultation with the President of the Republic.

Within one week of the declaration of the definitive election results, the President of the Republic shall charge the candidate of the party or the election coalition having won the largest number of seats in the Assembly of the Representatives of the People with forming a government, within a one month period, extendable once. If two or more parties or coalitions have the same number of seats, then the party or coalition having received the largest number of votes shall be asked to form a government.

If the specified period elapses without the formation of the government, or if the confidence of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People is not obtained, the President of the Republic shall consult with political parties, coalitions, and parliamentary groups, with the objective of charging the person judged most able to form a government within a period of not more than one month.

If in the four month period following the first designation of a person to form a government, the members of the Assembly of Representatives of the people fail to grant confidence in a government, the President of the Republic may dissolve the Assembly of the Representatives of the People and call for new legislative elections to be held within a minimum of 45 days and a maximum of 90 days.

The government shall present a summary of its programme to the Assembly of the Representatives of the People with the objective of obtaining the confidence of an absolute majority of its members. Should the government thus gain the confidence of the Assembly, the President of the Republic shall appoint the Head of Government and the members of the government.

The Head of Government and the members of the government shall swear the following oath before the President of the Republic:

“I swear by Almighty God to work loyally for the benefit of Tunisia, to respect the country’s Constitution and its legislation, to defend its interests and bear full allegiance to it”.

Article 90

Membership of the government and of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People may not be combined. The Electoral Law shall regulate the process of filling vacancies.

The head and members of government may not exercise any other professional activity.

Article 91

The Head of Government determines the state’s general policy, taking into account the provisions of Article 77, and shall ensure its execution.

Article 92

The Head of Government is responsible for:

- Creating, modifying and dissolving ministries and secretariats of state, as well as determining their mandates and prerogatives, after discussing the matter with the Council of Ministers
- Dismissing, and accepting the resignation(s), of one or more members of the government, after consultation with the President of the Republic in the case of the Ministers of Foreign Affairs and Defence.
- Creating, amending, and dissolving public institutions, public enterprises and administrative departments as well as establishing their mandates and authorities, after deliberation in the Council of Ministers, except in the case of institutions, enterprises and departments under the competence of the President of the Republic, which are created, changed or dissolved by proposition of the President.

- Nominating and dismissing individuals in senior civil positions.
These positions are determined by law.

The Head of Government informs the President of the Republic of the decisions taken within the latter's aforementioned specific areas of competence.

The Head of Government leads the public administration and concludes international agreements of a technical nature.

The government ensures the enforcement of laws. The Head of Government may delegate some of his/her authorities to the Ministers.

If the Head of Government is temporarily unable to carry out his/her tasks, he/she shall delegate his/her powers to one of the Ministers.

Article 93

The Head of Government chairs the Council of Ministers.

The Council of Ministers meets by convocation of the Head of Government, who sets its agenda.

It is mandatory for the President of the Republic to preside over the Council of Ministers in issues relating to defence, foreign policy, and national security as concerns the protection of the state and of the national territory from internal and external threats. The President may also attend the Council of Ministers' other meetings, and if so, he/she presides over the meeting.

All draft laws are discussed in the Council of Ministers.

Article 94

The Head of Government exercises general regulatory powers. He/she is individually responsible for issuing decrees that he/she signs after discussion with the Council of Ministers.

Orders issued by the Head of Government are referred to as governmental decrees.

Regulatory decrees are signed by the competent Minister.

The Head of Government shall countersign regulatory decrees issued by Ministers.

Article 95

The government is accountable before the Assembly of the Representatives of the People.

Article 96

Every Assembly member has the right to submit written or oral questions to the Government in accordance with the Assembly's internal rules of procedure.

Article 97

Votes may be taken on a motion of censure brought against the government based on a request with justification presented by at least one-third of the members to the President of the Assembly of Representatives. The motion of censure cannot be voted until fifteen days have expired from the date that the motion is presented to the President of the Assembly.

A vote of non-confidence in the government requires the vote of an absolute majority of the members of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People, and the presentation of an alternative candidate for the Head of Government whose candidacy must be approved in the same vote. The President of the Republic shall entrust this candidate with the task of forming the government, according to the provisions of Article 89.

In the event of failure to attain the necessary absolute majority, a motion of censure may not be reintroduced for a minimum period of six months.

The Assembly of the Representatives of the People may withdraw its confidence in a member of the government after a request with justification is submitted to the President of the Assembly by at least one-third of the members. Withdrawal of the Assembly's confidence in the member of the government requires an absolute majority of votes.

Article 98

The resignation of the Head of Government entails the resignation of the entire government. Resignation shall be submitted in writing to the President of the Republic who notifies the President of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People.

The Head of Government may request the Assembly of the Representatives of the People to give a vote of confidence to the government to continue its work. The vote of confidence shall be by an absolute majority of the members of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People. Should the Assembly not renew confidence in the government, the latter shall be deemed to have resigned.

In both cases, the President of the Republic shall assign the person who is most able to constitute the government in accordance with the provisions of Article 89.

Article 99

The President of the Republic may ask the Assembly of the Representatives of the People to renew its confidence in the government on a maximum of two occasions during the presidential mandate. Confidence is voted by the absolute majority of members of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People.

In the case of the non-renewal of confidence, the government is considered to have resigned. In this case the President of the Republic charges the person most able to form a government in a period not exceeding thirty days in conformity with the first, fifth, and sixth paragraphs of Article 89.

In the case of the expiry of this period, or in the case of the government not obtaining the confidence of the Assembly, the President of the Republic may dissolve the Assembly of the Representatives of the People and organize legislative elections after a minimum of forty five days and a maximum of ninety days.

In the case of the renewal of confidence occurring on two occasions under this provision, the President of the Republic will be considered to have resigned.

Article 100

If the post of Head of Government becomes permanently vacant for any reason except for resignation and withdrawal of confidence of the Assembly, the President of the Republic shall nominate the candidate of the ruling party or coalition with forming a government within one month. If this period passes without a government having been formed, or if the government formed fails to receive a vote of confidence, the President shall assign the individual most able to form a government to constitute a government, this government presents itself before the Assembly for the purpose of obtaining a vote of confidence in accordance with the provisions stipulated in Article 89.

The outgoing government shall continue to administer government business under the supervision of one of its members to be selected by the Council of Ministers and nominated by the President of the Republic until the new government takes up its functions.

Article 101

Any disputes that arise regarding the respective powers of the President of the Republic and of the Head of Government can be referred to the Constitutional Court by either party. The Court shall rule on the dispute within one week.

Chapter Five – The Judicial Authority

Article 102

The judicial authority is independent. It assures the administration of justice, the supremacy of the Constitution, the sovereignty of the law, and the protection of rights and freedoms.

The judiciary is independent. It is subject only to the law in the exercise of its functions.

Article 103

The judge must be competent, neutral, and of integrity. He/she is accountable for any shortcomings in his/her performance.

Article 104

Judges enjoy legal immunity and may not be prosecuted or arrested unless their immunity is lifted. In the event of being apprehended while committing a crime, a judge may be arrested and the Judicial Council shall be notified, and shall decide whether to lift the immunity.

Article 105

The law profession is a free independent profession that contributes to the establishment of justice and the defence of rights and liberties. Lawyers enjoy the legal guarantees that protect them and enable them to fulfil their functions.

Section One – Judiciary, and Administrative and Financial Judiciary

Article 106

Judges shall be nominated by the President of the Republic. Nominations shall conform to the proposal of the Supreme Judicial Council.

Senior judges shall be nominated by virtue of a presidential decree after consultation with the Head of Government, based on an exclusive proposition of the Supreme Judicial Council. Senior judicial posts shall be determined by law.

Article 107

No judge may be transferred without his/her consent. He/she cannot be dismissed or suspended from his/her functions, nor be subject to disciplinary sanction, except in the cases and with the protections determined by the law and by decision with justification of the Supreme Judicial Council.

Article 108

Every individual is entitled to a fair trial within a reasonable period. Litigants are equal before the law.

The right to litigation and the right to defence are guaranteed. The law facilitates access to justice and assures legal assistance to those without financial means. The law guarantees right to a second hearing.

Court sessions shall be public unless the law provides for a closed hearing. Judgement must be pronounced in a public session.

Article 109

Any interference in the functioning of the judicial system is prohibited.

Article 110

The different categories of courts are established by law. No special courts may be established, nor any special procedures that may prejudice the principles of fair trial.

Military courts are competent to deal with military crimes. The law shall regulate the mandates, composition, organization, and procedures of military courts, and the status of military judges.

Article 111

Judgments are issued in the name of the people and executed in the name of the President of the Republic. Failing to execute or impeding the execution of a sentence without legal grounds is prohibited.

Sub-Section One – Supreme Judicial Council

Article 112

The Supreme Judicial Council is composed of four bodies, which are the Judiciary Council, the Administrative Judicial Council, the Financial Judicial Council, and the General Assembly of the three judicial councils.

Two-thirds of each of these entities is composed of judges, the majority of whom are elected as well as judges appointed on merit, while the remaining third shall be composed of independent, specialised persons who are not judges. The majority of the members of these bodies shall be elected. Elected members exercise their functions for a single six-year term.

The Supreme Judicial Council shall elect its president from amongst its most senior judges.

The law establishes the mandate of each of the four bodies, and their composition, organization, and procedures.

Article 113

The Supreme Judicial Council enjoys administrative and financial independence and shall be self-managing. It prepares its own draft budget which it discusses before the competent committee of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People.

Article 114

The Supreme Judicial Council assures the sound functioning of the justice system and respect for its independence. The General Assembly of the three judicial councils proposes reforms and gives its opinions on draft laws relative to the judicial system, which must be presented to it. Each of the three councils is responsible to make decisions on the professional careers of judges and on disciplinary measures applying to judges.

The Supreme Judicial Council shall prepare an annual report and submit it, in the month of July at the latest, to the President of the Republic, the President of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People, and the Head of Government. The report shall be published.

The Assembly of the Representatives of the People shall discuss the annual report at the beginning of the judicial year in a plenary session, in dialogue with the Supreme Judicial Council.

Sub-Section Two – The Judiciary

Article 115

The judiciary is composed of the Court of Cassation, appellate courts and courts of first instance.

The public prosecution is part of the judicial justice system, and benefits from the same constitutional protections. The judges of the public prosecution exercise their functions as determined by the law and within the framework of the penal policy of the State in conformity with the procedures established by the law.

The Court of Cassation prepares an annual report which it submits to the President of the Republic, to the President of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People, to the Head of Government and to the head of the Supreme Judicial Council. The report is published.

A law establishes the organisation of the judicial system, its mandates, its procedures, as well as the status of its judges.

Sub-Section Three – Administrative Judiciary

Article 116

The administrative judiciary is composed of the Supreme Administrative Court, administrative courts of appeal, and administrative courts of first instance.

The administrative judiciary has jurisdiction over any abuse of power by the administration as well as all administrative disputes. The administrative judiciary shall exercise consultative functions, in accordance with the law.

The Supreme Administrative Court shall prepare a general annual report which it submits to the President of the Republic, the President of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People, the Head of Government, and the President of the Supreme Judicial Council. This report is published.

A law regulates the organization of the administrative judiciary, its mandate, procedures, as well as the status of its judges.

Sub-Section Four – Financial Judiciary

Article 117

The Financial Judiciary is composed of the Court of Audit with its different bodies.

The Court of Audit oversees the sound management of public funds in accordance with the principles of legality, efficiency and transparency. The Financial Judiciary rules on the accounts of public auditors. It assesses accounting methods and sanctions errors and failings that it discovers. The Financial Judiciary assists the legislative and executive powers in overseeing the execution of the Finance Law and the closure of the budget.

The Court of Audit prepares a general annual report and submits it to the President of the Republic, the President of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People, the Head of Government, and the President of the Supreme Judicial Council. The report is published. The Court of Audit shall, when necessary, prepare special reports that it may decide to publish.

The organization, mandate and procedures of the Court of Audit as well as the status of its judges are regulated by law.

Section Two – The Constitutional Court

Article 118

The Constitutional Court is an independent judicial body, composed of 12 competent members, three-quarters of whom are legal experts with at least 20 years of experience.

The President of the Republic, the Assembly of the Representatives of the People, and the Supreme Judicial Council shall each appoint four members, three quarters of whom must be legal specialists. The nomination is for a single nine-year term.

One-third of the members of the Constitutional Court shall be renewed every three-year period. Any vacancies in the Court shall be filled according to the appointment process, taking into account the appointing party and the relevant areas of specialisation.

The members of the Court shall elect a President and a Vice President of the Court from amongst its members who are specialists in law.

Article 119

Combining membership in the Constitutional Court with any other function or mission is prohibited.

Article 120

The Constitutional Court is the sole body competent to oversee the constitutionality of the following:

- Draft laws, upon the request of the President of the Republic, the Head of Government, or thirty members of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People. The request shall be filed within seven days from the Assembly's ratification of the draft law or ratification of a draft law in a modified version, after it has been returned from the President of the Republic.
- Constitutional draft laws submitted to it by the President of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People as specified in Article 144 or to determine whether the procedures of amending the Constitution have been respected.
- Treaties presented to it by the President of the Republic before their legislative ratification.
- Laws referred to it by courts as a result of a request filed by a court, in the case of the invocation of a claim of unconstitutionality by one of the parties in litigation, in accordance with the procedures established by law.
- The rules of procedure of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People, submitted to it by the President of the Assembly.

The Constitutional Court is also responsible for other tasks that are conferred upon it by the Constitution.

Article 121

Decisions of the Constitutional Court are issued within a deadline of 45 days from the date of challenging unconstitutionality. Decisions are taken by the absolute majority of the members of the Constitutional Court. The decision of the Court shall state whether the provisions that are subject to challenge are constitutional or not. Decisions issued by the Constitutional Court shall include justification and are binding upon all authorities. The decisions are published in the Official Gazette of the Tunisian Republic.

If the deadline specified in the first paragraph expires without the Court having issued its decision, it must immediately transmit the draft law to the President of the Republic.

Article 122

Any draft law that is determined to be in violation of the Constitution shall be referred to the President of the Republic who transmits it to the Assembly of the Representatives of the People for a second reading in accordance with the decision issued by the Constitutional Court. The President of the Republic shall, prior to the law's ratification, resubmit the law to the Constitutional Court to reconsider and rule on its constitutionality.

In the case of the adoption by the Assembly of the Representatives of the People of a draft law amended following its return, and where the court has affirmed its constitutionality, or where it transmits it to the President after expiry of its deadline for rendering its decision, the President of the Republic shall then refer it to the Constitutional Court before ratifying it.

Article 123

In the event the Constitutional Court is asked to rule on a claim of unconstitutionality, the Court shall be limited to examining the issues that have been put before it, on which it will rule within three months, which can be renewed only once for three months, and on the basis of a decision with justification.

If the Constitutional Court decides that a law is unconstitutional, the law's application is suspended within the limits specified by the Court.

Article 124

A law shall govern the organization of the Constitutional Court, and the procedures it should follow, as well as the guarantees enjoyed by its members.

Chapter Six – Independent Constitutional Bodies

Article 125

The independent constitutional bodies work to support democracy. All institutions of the state must facilitate their work.

These bodies shall enjoy a legal personality and financial and administrative independence.

They are elected by the Assembly of the Representatives of the People by qualified majority. They are responsible before the Assembly and shall submit an annual report to it. The report of each independent constitutional body is discussed in a special plenary session of the Assembly.

The law establishes the composition of these bodies, representation within them, the methods by which they are elected, and the processes for oversight of their functioning, and the procedures for assuring their accountability.

Section One – Electoral Commission

Article 126

The electoral commission, named the Supreme Independent Elections Commission, is responsible for the management and organization of elections and referenda, and supervising all their phases. The Commission shall ensure the regularity, integrity, and transparency of the election process, and shall announce the results of elections.

The Commission has regulatory power in its areas of responsibility.

The Commission shall be composed of nine independent, impartial, and competent members, with integrity, who undertake their work for a single six-year term. One third of its members are replaced every two years.

Section Two – Audio-Visual Communication Commission

Article 127

The Audio-Visual Communication Commission is responsible for the regulation and development of the audio-visual communication sector and works to guarantee freedom of expression and of information, and the establishment of a pluralistic media sector that functions with integrity.

The Commission has regulatory power in its domain of responsibility. It must be consulted on draft laws in its areas of competence.

The Commission shall be composed of nine independent, neutral, competent, experienced members with integrity, who serve for one six-year term. One third of its members are replaced every two years.

Section Three – Human Rights Commission

Article 128

The Human Rights Commission oversees respect for, and promotion of, human freedoms and rights, and makes proposals to develop the human rights framework. It must be consulted on draft laws that fall within the domain of its mandate.

The Commission conducts investigations into violations of human rights with a view to resolve them or to refer them to the competent authorities.

The Commission shall be composed of independent and impartial members with competence and integrity. They undertake their functions for a single six-year term.

Section Four – The Commission for Sustainable Development and for the Rights of Future Generations

Article 129

The Commission for Sustainable Development and For the Rights of Future Generations shall be consulted on draft laws related to economic, social and environmental issues, as well as development plans. The Commission may give its opinion on questions related to areas of responsibility.

The Commission shall be composed of members with competence and integrity, who undertake their missions for a single six-year term.

Section Five – The Commission for Good Governance and Anti-Corruption

Article 130

The Commission for Good Governance and Anti-Corruption contributes to policies of good governance, and preventing and fighting against corruption. It is responsible for following up on the implementation and dissemination of these policies, for the promotion of a culture of good governance, and for the consolidation of principles of transparency, integrity and accountability.

The Commission is responsible for monitoring cases of corruption within the public and private sectors. It carries out investigations into these cases and submits them to the competent authorities.

The Commission must be consulted on draft laws related to its area of competence. It can give its opinion on regulatory texts related to its area of competence.

The Commission is composed of independent, impartial, competent members, with integrity, who undertake their missions for a single six-year term. One third of the members are replaced every two years.

Chapter Seven – Local Government

Article 131

Local government is based on decentralization.

Decentralization is achieved through local authorities comprised of municipalities, districts, and regions covering the entire territory of the Republic in accordance with boundaries established by law.

The law may provide for the creation of specific types of local authorities.

Article 132

Local authorities shall enjoy legal personality as well as financial and administrative independence. They manage local matters in accordance with the principle of administrative autonomy.

Article 133

Local authorities are headed by elected councils.

Municipal and regional councils are elected through general, free, direct, secret, fair, and transparent elections.

District councils are elected by the members of municipal and regional councils.

The electoral law shall guarantee the representation of youth in local authority councils.

Article 134

Local authorities possess their own powers, powers shared with the central authority, and powers delegated to them from the central administration.

The joint and delegated powers shall be distributed in accordance with the principle of subsidiarity.

Local authorities shall enjoy regulatory power in exercising their mandates. Regulatory decisions of the local authorities shall be published in an official gazette of local authorities.

Article 135

Local authorities shall have their own resources, and resources that are provided to them by the central government, these resources being proportional to the responsibilities that are assigned to them by law.

All creation or transfer of powers by the central government to the local authorities shall be accompanied with corresponding resources.

The financial system of local authorities shall be established by law.

Article 136

The central government shall provide additional resources for local authorities in order to apply the principle of solidarity, in a balanced and organised manner.

The central government works towards achieving an equilibrium between local revenues and expenditures.

A portion of revenues coming from the exploitation of natural resources may be allocated to the promotion of regional development throughout the national territory.

Article 137

Local authorities shall have the freedom to manage their resources freely within the budget that is allocated to them, in accordance with the principles of good governance and under the supervision of the financial judiciary.

Article 138

Local authorities are subject to retrospective review of the legality of their actions.

Article 139

Local authorities shall adopt the mechanisms of participatory democracy and the principles of open governance to ensure the broadest participation of citizens and of civil society in the preparation of development programmes and land use planning, and follow up on their implementation, in conformity with the law.

Article 140

Local authorities may cooperate and enter into partnerships with each other with a view to implementing programmes or carrying out activities of common interest.

Local authorities may also establish partnership relationships and decentralized cooperation with local authorities in other countries.

Rules for cooperation and partnership between authorities shall be regulated by law.

Article 141

The High Council of Local Authorities is a representative structure for all local authorities' councils. The High Council headquarters will be located outside of the capital.

The High Council of Local Authorities has jurisdiction to consider issues related to development and regional balance, and gives its advice with respect to any draft law related to local planning, budget, and financial issues. The President of the High Council of Local Authorities may be invited to attend discussions of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People.

The composition and tasks of the High Council of Local Authorities shall be established by law.

Article 142

The administrative judiciary shall pass judgment on all jurisdictional disputes arising between local authorities and between the central government and local authorities.

Chapter Eight – Revision of the Constitution

Article 143

The right to propose revision of the Constitution is held by the President of the Republic, and by one-third of the members of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People. A proposition initiated by the President of the Republic shall have priority.

Article 144

The President of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People shall submit all propositions to amend the Constitution to the Constitutional Court to verify that such propositions do not affect any article to which the Constitution has prohibited any amendment.

The Assembly of the Representatives of the People shall study the proposed amendment with a view to obtaining the approval of the absolute majority of the members on the principle of amendment.

The Constitution shall be amended upon the approval of two-thirds of the members of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People. The President has the right, after this approval by two-thirds of the members of the Assembly, to submit the amendment to referendum; in which case it will be adopted if it receives a majority of votes cast.

Chapter Nine – Final Provisions

Article 145

This Constitution's preamble is an integral part of the Constitution.

Article 146

The Constitution's provisions shall be understood and interpreted in harmony, as in indissoluble whole.

motivée du Conseil supérieur de la magistrature.

Article 147

Within one week after adoption of the Constitution in its entirety, in conformity with the dispositions of article 3 of the Constituent Law 6-2011 dated 16 December 2011, relative to the provisional organization of public powers, the National Constituent Assembly shall meet in extraordinary plenary session during which the Constitution is to be promulgated by the President of the Republic, the President of the National Constituent Assembly, and the Head of the Government.

The President of the National Constituent Assembly immediately orders its publication in a special edition of the Official Gazette of the Tunisian Republic. The Constitution enters into force immediately after its publication. The President of the National Constituent Assembly announces in advance the date of its publication.

Chapter Ten – Transitional Provisions

Article 148

1. The dispositions of articles 5, 6, 8, 15 and 16 of the law relating to the Provisional Organisation of Public Powers remain in effect until the election of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People.

The dispositions of Article 4 of the law relating to the Provisional Organisation of Public Powers remain in effect until the election of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People. Nevertheless, from the entry into force of the Constitution, a draft law presented by the deputies is not admissible unless it relates to the electoral process, to the system of transitional justice or to the bodies created by laws of the National Constituent Assembly.

The dispositions of Articles 7, 9 to 14 and Article 26 of the law relating to the Provisional Organisation of Public Powers remain in effect until the election of the President of the Republic according to the dispositions of Article 74 and following of the Constitution.

Provisions of Articles 17 through 20 of the law relating to the Provisional Organization of Public Powers remain in effect until the first government obtains confidence from the Assembly of the Representatives of the People.

The National Constituent Assembly continues to exercise its legislative, electoral and oversight prerogatives established by the constituent law relating to the Provisional Organisation of Public Powers or by the laws in effect, until the election of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People.

2. The dispositions mentioned below enter in force as follows:
 - The dispositions of Chapter III relating to the Legislative Authority, with the exception of Articles 53, 54, 55, as well as Title II of Chapter IV concerning the government, enter into force from the date of the proclamation of the definitive results of the first legislative elections;

- With the exception of Articles 74 and 75, the dispositions of Title I of Chapter IV relating to the President of the Republic enter in force from the date of the proclamation of the definitive results of the first direct presidential elections. Articles 74 and 75 enter into force only when the President of the Republic is elected directly;
 - With the exception of Articles 108 through 111, the dispositions of Title I of Chapter V relating to the judicial, administrative, and financial judiciary enter in force after the creation of the Supreme Judicial Council;
 - With the exception of Article 118, the dispositions of Title II of Chapter V relating to the Constitutional Court enter into force from the creation of the first Constitutional Court;
 - The dispositions of Chapter VI relative to the constitutional bodies enter into force after the election of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People;
 - The dispositions of Chapter VII relating to local authorities enter into effect as soon as the laws that are mentioned within the Chapter enter into force.
3. Presidential and legislative elections are organised at the earliest four months after the creation of the Supreme Independent Elections Authority. In any event, the elections will be organised before the end of 2014.
 4. Endorsements are made for the first direct presidential election by the number of members of the National Constituent Assembly corresponding to the number established for the members of the Assembly of the Representatives of the People, or by the number of registered electors, as established in the electoral law.
 5. The Supreme Council of the Judiciary is created within a maximum of six months from the date of the first legislative election. The Constitutional Court is created within a maximum of one year from the election.

6. The two first partial renewals of the Constitutional Court, of the Elections Commission, of the Audio-visual Communications Commission, and the Good Governance and Rights of Future Generations Commission are carried out by a draw between the initially nominated members. The presidents of these bodies are exempted from these draws.
7. In the first three months following the promulgation of the Constitution, the National Constituent Assembly creates, by an organic law, a provisional authority in charge of determining the constitutionality of laws. It is composed of:
 - The first President of the Court of Cassation, who presides over it;
 - The first President of the Administrative Tribunal;
 - The first President of the Audit Court;
 - Three members, experts in law, each appointed on an equal basis by the President of the National Constituent Assembly, the President of the Republic and the Head of Government.

No tribunal may be authorised to determine the constitutionality of laws.

The mandate of this authority ends after the establishment of the Constitutional Court.

8. The provisional authority responsible for supervising the judicial justice system retains its functions until the creation of the Supreme Judicial Council.

The Independent Authority for Audio-Visual Communications retains its mandate until the election of the Audio-Visual Communication Commission.

9. The state undertakes to apply the system of transitional justice in all its domains and according to the deadlines prescribed by the relevant legislation. In this context the invocation of the non-retroactivity of laws, the existence of previous amnesties, the force of res judicata, and the prescription of a crime or a punishment are considered inadmissible.

Article 149

The military tribunals continue to exercise the jurisdiction they have been granted by the current laws until their amendment by the dispositions of article 110.

And God is the guarantor of success
